2020 ANNUAL REPORT

Our Promise 2030:

Building Brighter Futures for Vulnerable Children

Foreword

National Director of World Vision China, Mr. John Teng, provided his support for “It Takes a World to End Domestic Violence Against Children” campaign.

John (right), made dumplings during a visit to the Sunshine Home, a center for people with disability.

Living up to its title as a “new” decade, 2020 has certainly driven humanity to review our priorities and find new ways to get things done. Since the coronavirus outbreak early in the year, World Vision China has been constantly adjusting our priorities and finding creative solutions to address the challenges that this global pandemic has brought. In southern parts of China, many communities were further impacted by the most severe floods in 30 years during the summer months.

These challenges made the team at World Vision more determined to constantly adapt and find new ways to help children and their families build sustainable futures. One thing remained constant throughout the uncertainties of 2020: our deep commitment to serve the most vulnerable children—migrant and left-behind children, those with special needs, and children who have been affected by disasters. The challenges presented by events this year is a reminder of the significant needs and the resolve required to serve these children.

Nobel Peace Prize winner, Desmond Tutu, once said “hope is being able to see that there is light despite all of the darkness”. 2020 may have thrown many curve balls at us, but with the support and dedication of everyone involved- our front line staff, partners, volunteers and donors, we have continued to bring hope to many children and their families. This Report is a testament to that.

As you delve into the pages of this Report, I hope your hearts will be lifted by the stories, facts and figures. After all, the achievements featured here are not merely a show of the progress we have made, and what still needs to be done, but also a celebration of the impact and hope we have created together for those who truly need it most.

With heartfelt appreciation and hope always,

World Vision sent a second batch of relief assistance to Wuyuan County in September 2020. Xiaoshi's family received 15 kilograms of rice and a family kit which consisted of daily necessities such as a water pail, torchlight, cooking pan and tableware.
